He has also attended the Chinese language immersion program at the East Asian Summer Language Institute at Indiana University in Bloomington, Ind. He was one of two Dickinson College delegates to the U.S. Naval Academy's 1997 Foreign Affairs Conference in Annapolis, Md.

Before attending college, he served seven years as an intelligence analyst and paratrooper in the Army's 1st Battalion of the 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment at Fort Campbell, Ky., and the 17th Aviation Brigade and Combined U.S.-Korean Aviation Force in South Korea.

He participated in the 1989 U.S. response to the FMLN terrorist assault on the U.S. embassy in El Salvador and the 1989 U.S. invasion of Panama, during which his unit rescued Curt Muse, an illegally imprisoned CIA-backed Voice of America radio operator.

He aided in rounding up Noreiga and his henchmen and in Desert Storm, during which his unit infiltrated reconnaissance teams behind Iraqi lines to locate SCUD missiles and their launch sites. It was his experiences as a soldier that led him to a major in international studies.

While at Dickinson, he was awarded a merit scholarship from the Army Aviation Association of America.

Sean will spend this summer studying Chinese at Middlebury College's Summer Language School in Vermont, and will spend next year studying Chinese at Renmin University in Beijing, China.

Afterward, Sean intends to pursue graduate and legal study here, and a career in business, politics and U.S. foreign relations.

Donahue is the grandson of Joseph LaRose of Hazleton, and the late Marie LaRose, William and Mary Donahue, all of Hazleton.
